

CONTEMPTUOUS OFFERS

The pay gap between public sector employees and other Quebecers is getting wider.

Professionals were earning 7.5% less in 2020, while for technicians, the gap was 8.4%. There's been no improvement since then, as demonstrated by the salaries offered by employment agencies and the private sector.

The Legault government is offering a puny 5% pay increase over the next three years.

This will barely cover inflation, and the pay gap will continue to grow. Worse yet, employees will actually see their wages fall as the 4% premium is abolished when the COVID-19 health emergency comes to an end.

The government has to act now to end the labour shortage in our public system. And to do that, it needs to offer compensation that actually reflects the value of the vital work we do!
