

OUR PUBLIC SYSTEM IS VULNERABLE

When we look at the juicy contracts given to private labs, medical imaging firms, employment agencies, and psychologists and psychotherapists in private practice, we see how little consideration the government has for employees in the public system.

A puny 5% pay increase over three years, and major setbacks in terms of organization of work, will certainly not put an end to the labour shortage in the health and social services system.

We need to mobilize and get the Legault government to see sense. Underhanded manoeuvres to privatize our public system will not be accepted!
